Assistant Professor of Psychology

Position Reports To: Social Sciences Department Chair

Position Summary: The Social Science Department has an opening for a Capstone-track Assistant Professor of Psychology in the undergraduate psychology program starting in the 2022-2023 academic year. The candidate selected for this position will be responsible for teaching six courses each academic year. Courses will primarily include General Psychology, courses in the research methods sequence (e.g., Statistics and Research Design, Critical Thinking in Psychology, Foundations of Behavioral Research, Integrative Capstone), and additional upper-level courses in the candidate's subfield specialization. To ensure full consideration, materials must be submitted by November 30, 2021.

Qualifications:

- Earned Ph.D. in psychology (or specific subfield) or Psy.D. required. Applicants who have not earned Ph.D./Psy.D. but will defend before position start date may be considered with letter of support from dissertation chair specifying date of scheduled defense.
- Experience teaching at the university/collegiate level is required. Experience teaching General Psychology, Statistics and Research Design, Critical Thinking in Psychology, and/or Foundations of Behavioral Research preferred. Experience teaching and using SPSS is preferred. Experience as an independent course instructor preferred but will consider applicants with extensive experience as a teaching assistant in relevant courses.
- Demonstrable commitment to promoting and enhancing diversity, equity, and inclusion in your teaching and campus community engagement. Applicants should describe their experience in these arenas in a separate "Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion" statement.
- To ensure full consideration, applicants are required to submit: (1) curriculum vitae; (2) cover letter addressing the specific qualifications of the position; (3) statement of teaching philosophy; (4) diversity, equity, and inclusion statement; (5) 5-year research agenda with description of ongoing/future project(s), publications (in progress/planned), and required resources; and (6) contact information for three professional references.

Duties and Responsibilities:

- Teaching 3 courses in Fall and Spring semesters (6 courses per academic year) in General Psychology, research methods sequence, and other areas as identified by the program.
- Developing and implementing a research agenda which results in scholarly publications and presentations.
- Actively engaging in the campus community and efforts to promote and enhance diversity, equity, and inclusion.
- Actively engaging in program/department service, including but not limited to: academic advising; program/department meetings; student recruitment/engagement events; supervising internships; program/department assessment; and other tasks identified by department chair and program coordinator.
- Actively engaging in university service, including but not limited to: university and School of Arts, Sciences, and Business (SASB) faculty meetings; professional development seminars/workshops; service on university committees.
